CONCLUSION

Currently no other 100% traditional owner indigenous company can offer the range of services and specialised skill set across the Australian Railway industry. Our operational base is in Port Hedland where we service our clients locally in the Pilbara through to National and International engagements with industry and contracting partners.
If we do not have the required expertise in-house we use our network of like minded businesses to find the best people and resources required to deliver a safe productive outcome.

While NWCR has a vision to provide strong and stable service and in turn enrich Pilbara communities through opportunities and development, we understand the requirement to work hand in hand with both our clients and other businesses to be successful in reaching full potential. NWCR believes that the rail industry provides an environment unlike no other - it brings large numbers of people to work together with each job being a small stepping stone of a bigger and better world. We must provide a high quality service so that we can offer a sustainable source of employment to support progress and growth of our community.

NWCR is ready, Will you be a pillar for change ?
